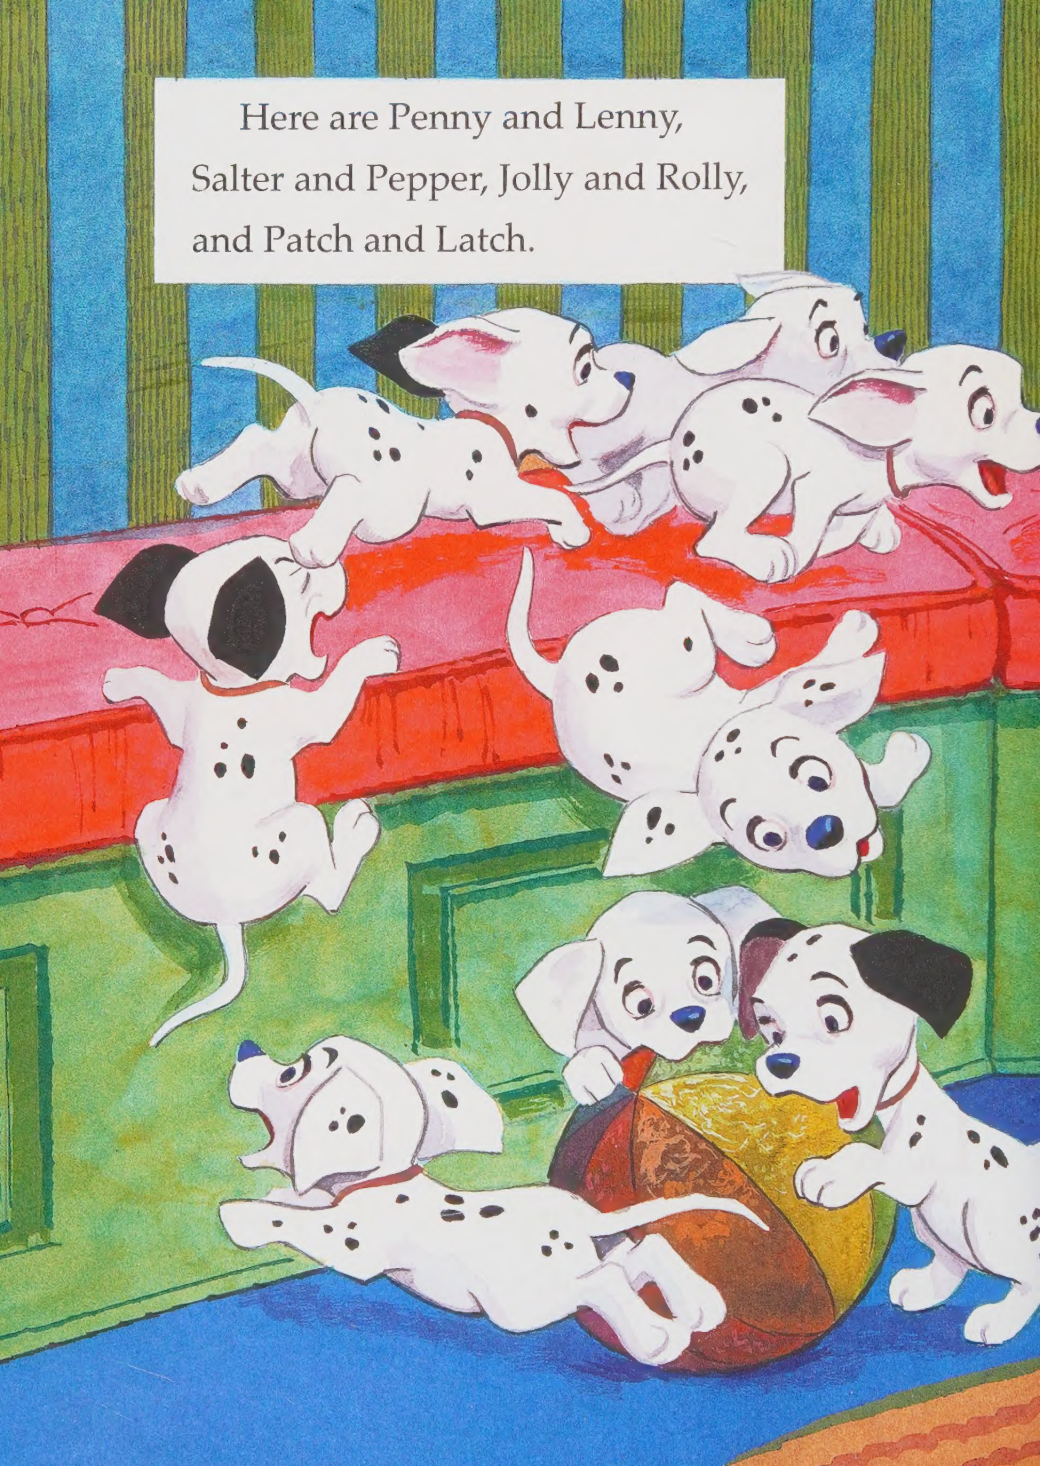
Lucky the puppy lived with his father, Pongo, and his mother, Perdita, and with all his sisters and brothers. The people who belonged to them were Roger and Anita and Nanny Cook. (That's Nanny Cook in the doorway above.)



Here are Penny and Lenny,
Salter and Pepper, Jolly and Rolly,
and Patch and Latch.

Here are Spot and Dot, Blob and Blot, Blackie and Whitey, and—where's Lucky?

Whenever Penny and Lenny wanted to dig holes,

or Salter and Pepper
wanted to chew bones . . .

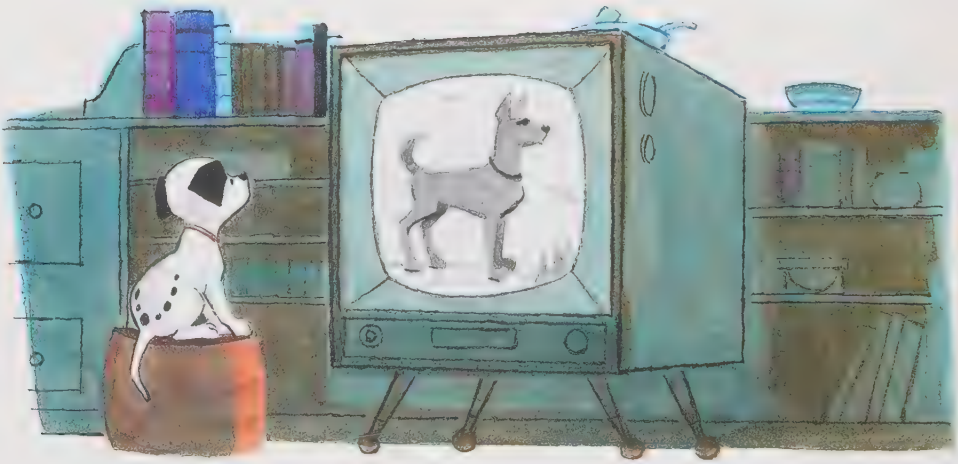
. . . or Patch and Latch
wanted to chase tails,

or Jolly and Rolly wanted to jump
at Nanny Cook's apron strings . . .

. . . or Spot and Dot wanted to play hide-and-seek,

or Blob and Blot wanted to growl at the mirror . . .

. . . or Blackie and Whitey wanted to take a nap,



Lucky never joined in. He just wanted to sit in front of the television watching Thunderbolt.

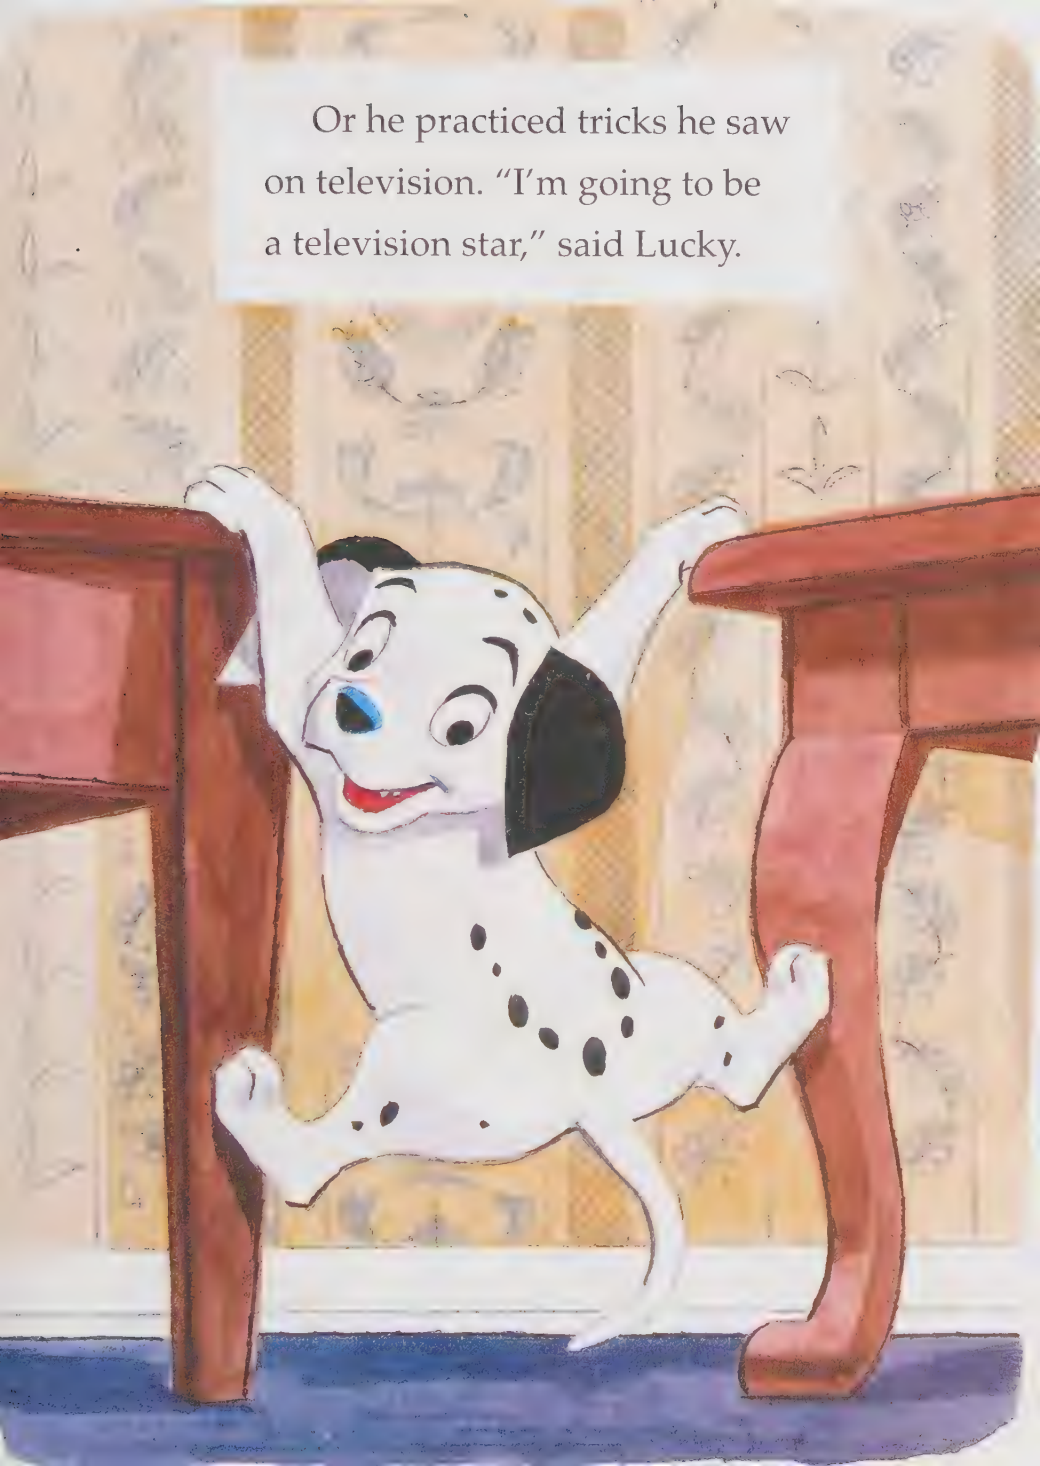
Or he practiced tricks he saw on television. "I'm going to be a television star," said Lucky.



Well, all the other puppies learned puppy tricks. Soon they could sit up and roll over.

They could dance and shake hands.

They could jump for a treat and walk politely on a leash.

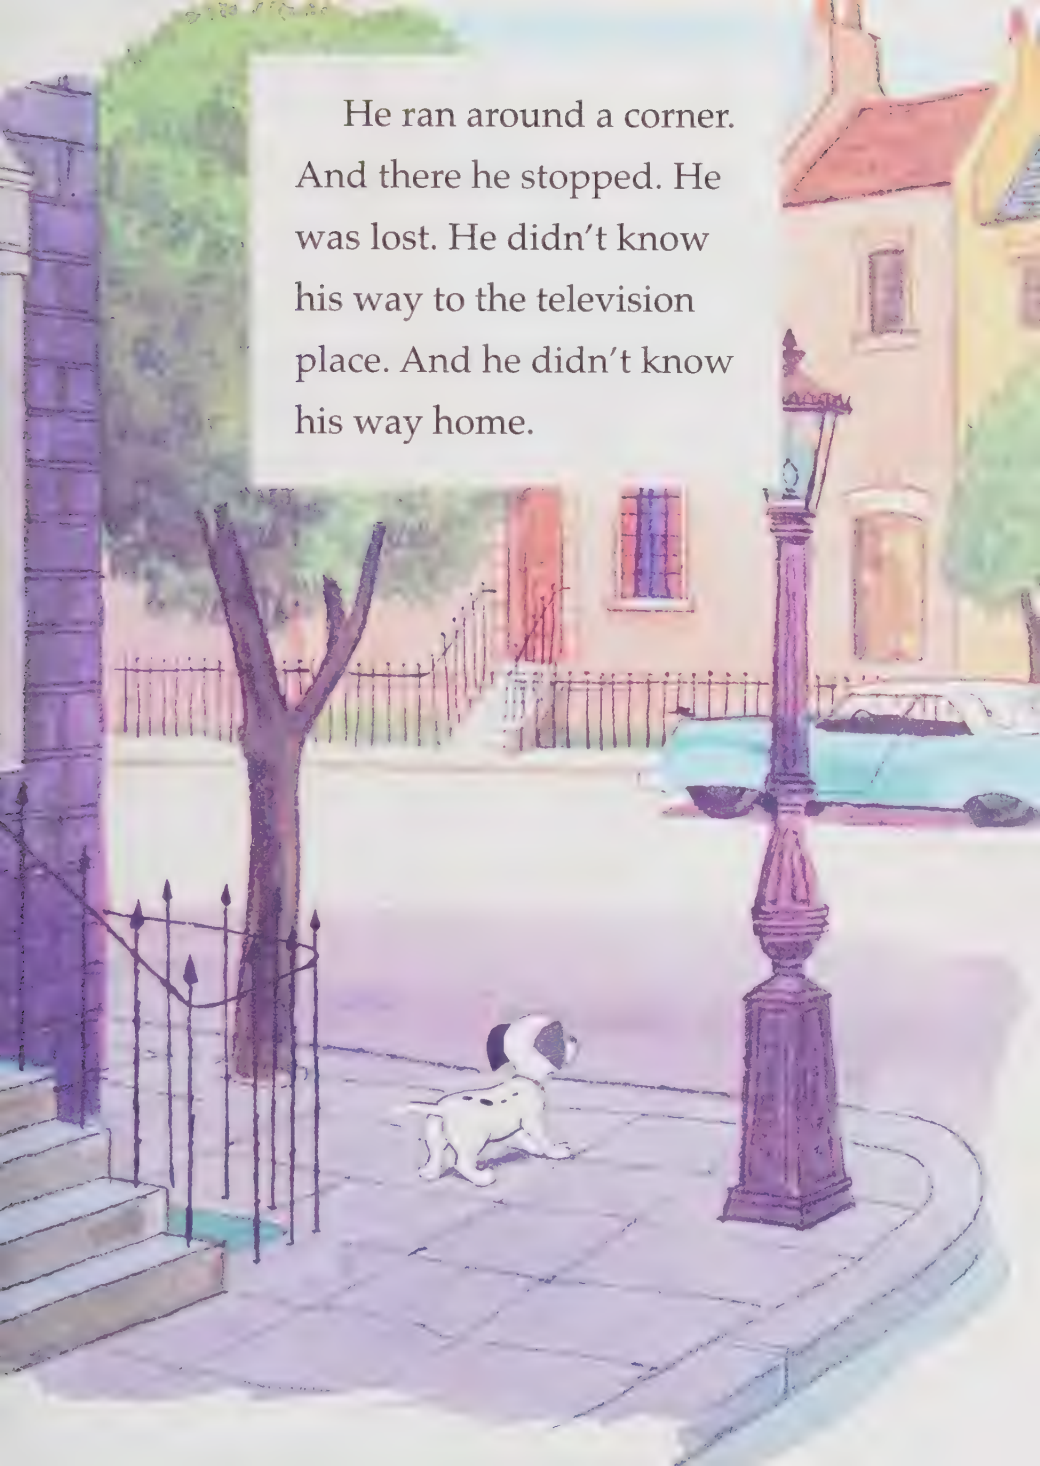
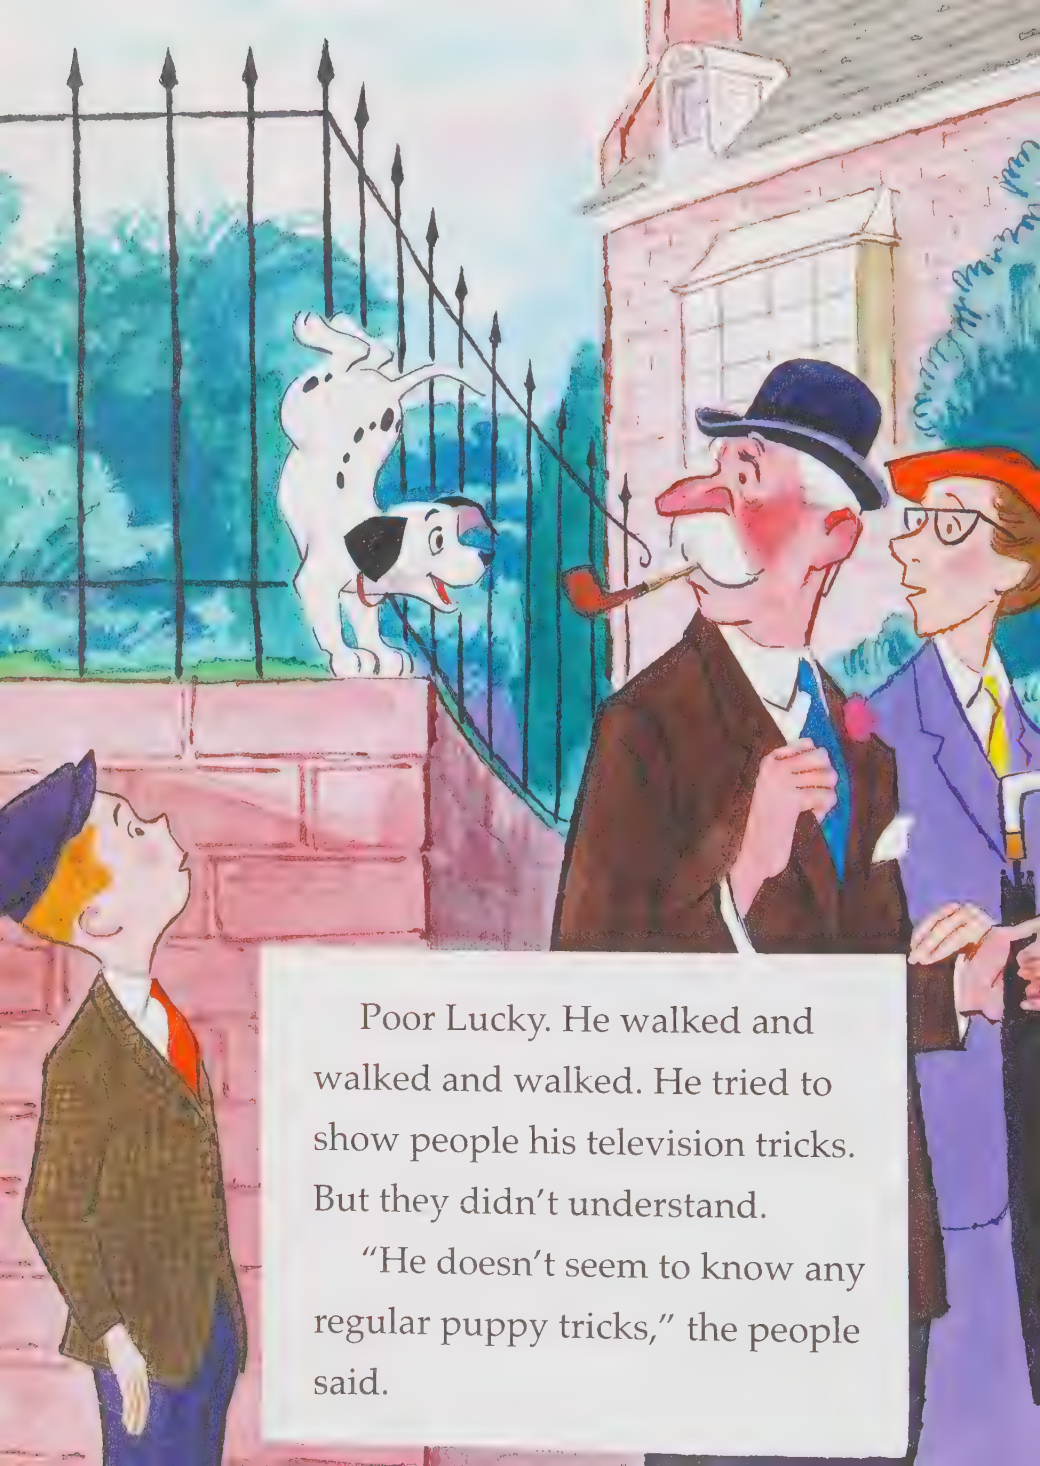
But not Lucky. He was too busy dreaming about being a television star.

One day, he decided he was ready to be in a television show. So he slipped out of the house and ran down the street.



He ran around a corner. And there he stopped. He was lost. He didn't know his way to the television place. And he didn't know his way home.



Poor Lucky. He walked and walked and walked. He tried to show people his television tricks. But they didn't understand.

"He doesn't seem to know any regular puppy tricks," the people said.

Finally, a policeman came along. He looked at Lucky's tag.
And he took Lucky home.

There were Penny and Lenny,
Salter and Pepper, Jolly and Rolly,
Patch and Latch,

Spot and Dot, Blob and Blot, and Blackie and Whitey, all doing puppy tricks for treats. But not Lucky.

Lucky was all tired out.
He crept straight into his basket.
And he went to sleep.

He even slept through the Thunderbolt show while the other puppies watched.

But the next morning, Lucky was up bright and early. "Time enough for television later," he said. "Now I am going to learn my puppy tricks." And he did!
